Chapter 394: The Infinite Horizon

The Eternal Watcher

Though peace had enveloped the multiverse, an inevitable curiosity lingered in Sung Jin-Woo's heart. As the True Absolute One, his power was absolute, his influence beyond compare, but with the Watchers Beyond Time gone and the multiverse under his rule, a new question arose: what lay beyond the boundaries of his domain?

With his Divine Triad by his side and his divine tools now at their full potential, Sung Jin-Woo began to contemplate the infinite horizon that extended beyond his grasp. The True Absolute One Domain Realm, True Celestial Realm, and True Dragon God Realm were perfect, eternal, and boundless in their own right, but the multiverse was not the end of everything. The very notion of "beyond" still stirred something deep within his essence.

Even though the Divine Triad had achieved unimaginable power, and their influence spread across hundreds of universes, there was an ever-present sense that something larger, something deeper, lay beyond even the current multiverse. Perhaps it was an ancient, unspeakable force. Perhaps it was the very origin of existence itself.

The Creation of The Boundless Realm

In the center of his True Absolute One Domain Realm, Sung Jin-Woo decided to build something even greater—a realm that would transcend even the True Absolute One Domain Realm itself. He called it the Boundless Realm, a space that existed not only above time, space, and creation but also beyond the very limits of existence. This realm would be a gateway to explore what lay at the edges of reality, where even the highest gods dared not venture.

As Sung Jin-Woo began shaping this new realm, he infused it with the essence of all things that had ever existed. Light, darkness, creation, and destruction—each element formed the foundation of the Boundless Realm, yet its structure remained formless and fluid, ever-changing and infinite.

The Divine Triad stood by his side, their wings stretching into the limitless expanse, watching as their lord and leader began his creation.

The Journey Begins

Upon the completion of the Boundless Realm, Sung Jin-Woo stepped into the domain, feeling its infinite potential and the presence of all things that could be and could never be. The realm pulsed with the energy of creation, yet its meaning was elusive, beyond even his understanding. It was a space of paradoxes—both everything and nothing.

As he moved through the realm, Sung Jin-Woo reached the farthest corners, where no matter, no law, no being had ever touched. He stood in the very fabric of emptiness, staring at an uncharted horizon. There was no beginning, no end—just an endless void where everything could be shaped anew.

For the first time since his ascension, Sung Jin-Woo felt uncertainty—an unfamiliar sensation. The answers he sought, the ultimate truths that had once been within his reach, now felt distant, unreachable.

The Origin of Everything

As he ventured further, he encountered a mysterious entity—a presence so ancient that it seemed to be woven into the very fibers of the Boundless Realm. It was not a being in the traditional sense, but a force—an entity that transcended concepts of life and death, creation and destruction.

This force spoke not in words, but in pulses of energy, its form flickering like a mirage on the edge of perception. It was the source of all things, the beginning and the end, the essence of existence itself.

"You have come far, True Absolute One," it resonated through the vast expanse. "You seek what lies beyond even your reach, but know this: even the greatest of beings must one day face the infinite horizon. For what exists beyond is not just power—it is the essence of understanding, of balance, and of sacrifice."

A Decision for the Future

The presence faded, leaving Sung Jin-Woo with a heavy burden. It was clear that there was no simple answer to what lay beyond the Boundless Realm. The journey to the ultimate truth was one of infinite complexity. It required more than just power—it required a deep understanding of existence itself, and the willingness to face its most profound mysteries.

Sung Jin-Woo knew that he could no longer rely on mere strength to find the answers he sought. There would be no battles to fight, no enemies to conquer. The true challenge would lie in the pursuit of knowledge—an eternal quest for understanding, where the very fabric of the multiverse would reveal its deepest truths.

With the Divine Triad by his side, Sung Jin-Woo began a new journey—not one of domination, but one of enlightenment. He would learn, explore, and ultimately understand the very core of existence itself. And in doing so, he would transcend the boundaries of even the Boundless Realm.
